¹⁴³Chronology would suggest that this Alexander Stewart is identical with the Alexander Stewart, son of Alexander Stewart of Urrard, who had a son Robert Stewart who m. to Isabel Lamont and had issue 1. Duncan Stewart, who m. to Janet Stewart (she d. on 19 April, 1795,) d. on 20 May, 1789, and had issue a) Robert Stewart, b. in 1754 and d. on 24 June, 1835, aged 81 years and is then styled as heir male of the family of Urrard and Baloan. The descent given on the monument is : Robert Stewart, 3rd of Baloan, son of Alexander Stewart, second son of Alexander Stewart of Urrard, although it must be considered that Alexander Stewart of Urrard died in 1641 and therefore chronology does not in anyway support the traditional descent with it being more likely that the actual name of the Stewart of Urrard from whom they were descended had become confused over the generations. Chronology, coupled with documentary evidence, does support the theory that the founder was infact Alexander Stewart, son of John Stewart of Urrard whose issue, if he were the second son, be heirs male of te family upon the extinction of the senior male line. 3. John Stewart, more popularly known as “John Dow McGilliechallum” or “Black John the son of Malcolm” who, with his brother Alexander, was a turbulent force within Atholl. They were pursued by the Privy Council for being “fugitives and outlawis for vyld and abominable murthouris and otheris odious crimes” in 1606. Matters had escalated to such an extent that the Privy Council pursued “the Baron Reade” Alexander Tarlochson of Inchmagranoch and Neil Stewart McGilliechallum, John’s his brother, for having reset and entertained him and bound the Earl of Atholl, to apprehend he and his accomplices and bring order back to his lands but which he could not manage and as a result of which he was put to the horn and ordered to commit himself in ward to Edinburgh Castle as a penalty until the offenders had been brought to justice. In 1607, although his brother Alexander had been captured and executed, John still remained at large with a considerable force of armed men and a commission was granted to James Gordon, younger of Lesmore, to pass to Atholl and seek him out with sanctions being given for he use of hagbuts and pistols although this also was to no avail. Later in 1607 commissions were granted to the Stewart of Grantully, Ballechin, Kinnaird and Foss to form a Watch and to bring peace to Atholl which appears to have been successful.
